I had an issue with a hernia.

A friend of mine had just recently had a hernia surgery, and so I thought, well, I better get this checked out. So, I went to, my physician.

He said, yes. You need to have this operated on.

I got everything scheduled, and I went in early that morning for the surgery and checked in like you normally would, insurance card, all the things, and noticed there was a brochure there at the side that said Commerce Bank.

It was an opportunity to finance my part of the cost of the surgery.

I'm self-employed. I have a pretty high deductible on my insurance, and so I was happy to see that there might be an alternative rather than trying to figure out some other payment plan or dig into savings.

I got the information, filled it out, had the surgery, and then received all the information for a monthly payment plan.

That gave me a peace of mind in that at least it was, something that I was going to be able to do. We didn't it didn't create a big financial burden.

Within two years of that, before I had my procedure part paid for, my wife ended up having a surgery that was far more serious. I confidently went in, said, we want to do the payment plan because we know how it works, and so we've benefited from it twice.
